ROBERT K. WITTMAN spent twenty years as an FBI special agent. Rising from humble roots as the son of an antiques dealer, Wittman built a 20-year law-enforcement career that was nothing short of extraordinary. Armed with a scholar’s passion, a con man’s smile, and a daredevil’s nerves, he worked undercover to catch art thieves, scammers, and black market traders in Paris and Philadelphia, Rio and Santa Fe, Miami and Madrid.

In his page-turning memoir, Wittman fascinates with the stories behind his recoveries of priceless art and antiquities, including the golden armor of an ancient Peruvian warrior king; the Rodin sculpture that inspired the Impressionist movement; the headdress Geronimo wore at his final pow-wow; the rare Civil War flag carried into battle by one of the nation's first African-American regiments. Wittman has rescued paintings by Rockwell, Rembrandt, Pissarro, Monet, and Picasso; recovered an original copy of the Bill of Rights; and cracked the scam that rocked the PBS series Antiques Roadshow.

By the FBI's accounting, Wittman saved hundreds of millions of dollars' worth of art and antiquities. He says the statistic isn't important. After all, who's to say what is worth more — a Rembrandt self-portrait or an American flag carried into battle? They're both priceless.
